

Adit

Building Better Broadband for Britain

The best deal in broadband network services for the public sector

The Broadband Aggregation Programme (BAP) is a joint central Government and Regional Development Agency initiative which has created 10 trading organisations called Adits to achieve optimum value for money and availability in delivery of innovative and cost-effective broadband and network related solutions.

What does Adit do?

Adit will advise on the best solutions and aggregate demand from different public sector bodies to make significant savings from pre-approved suppliers.

Adits offer:

- Access to real time market pricing
- Increased speed to market with lower transaction costs
- The OJEU procurement process already undertaken
- Transparent and competitive supplier process via 17 approved suppliers
- High quality technical expertise
- New technology and future proofing
- Existing contract analysis
- Respect for PFI environments and existing contracts
- Joined-up thinking and working across public bodies in your area
- Contracts with suppliers managed by OGCBuying.solutions
- Assistance with delivery of e-government targets
- Genuine choice

Cross-Government focus and support

Adit is actively engaged nationally and regionally with many Government departments and Local Authorities and is supporting the delivery of NHS and DfES broadband rollout programmes.

Safe in the hands of market leaders

To simplify and accelerate your procurement process, we have set up framework agreements with 17 leading telecoms suppliers which you can access by procuring through Adit.
